After Seven Years.

Seven years! Can it be? Why it dosen't seem a week since I sailed out of this very harbor, to seek my fortune in California. Thus I thought as I leaned over the rail of the old Star of the West as she slowly steamed up New York Bay, upon a beautiful June morning, in the year of our Lord, eighteen hundred and sixty.

I looked down upon the yeasty foam which streamed hissing from the beating paddles out into a great widening, silvery wake, that sparkled and flashed behind us away down toward the Hook, till lost in the dazzling radience of the Atlantic's waves, all aglow with morning sunlight So, methought, fades the golden past of my California life, with its fascinating adventures, its quaintness, and all its vivid pictures, tinged and painted, as they were, with mystic colors of diablerie.

But what of the future?—and I looked forward, eagerly, for an omen. A heavy mist overhung the city, low-browed and threatening, but its higher spires and domes shone out above the fog-veil, afire with glorious sunbeams.

How New York had changed in those seven years. It was startling even to me, with all my wistern ideas of progress, to see the wonderful advance this young Empire City had made It was a city of palaces! For miles I rode on toward my hotel, between glass and marble ecifices fit for princes' dwellings, and I was half stunned by the roar of wheels, and the din of uncounted multitudes.

After dinner, over a glass of Maderia, I began to think over my half-formed, indefinite plans, and shape out misty, weaving air castles, into something tangible.

My money was all safe in the bank vaults, and I had neither kith nor kin to engage me for an hour; so from my heart, as I sat thinking what I should do, there flashed out the true purpose for my voyage Eastward, which all along I had been half ashamed to acknowledge even to myself, hiding it under the thread-bare excuse of "necessity of travel," "fortune made, must see the world," etc. But now, no further concealment could avail. I knew now what I had come for; it was to see her

Dear Nellie! It is seven years since I bade you "good buy"—my boy heart almost breaking with anguish—and you, ah, if that kiss was not belied! But what shall I find you? It is five years since a single line from you has cheered the poor vagabond, toiling drearily in the rugged canons of the Sierra Nevadas. Faint rumors of estrangements and engagements, had reached me at odd times, which made my heart beat wickedly beneath my red shirt, but never anything definite; so at last when my fortune came to me, one day, in divers goodly nuggets, I resolved to make the voyage East, scarce hoping to find Nellie save as the light of some other home, lost to me forever.

It was a Saturday afternoon when I took the cars for H——, where she lived. An accident had detained the train for several hours and the church bells had long since ceased ringing for Sunday morning service, as the stage, in which for the last four hours I had been jolted and banged about, drew up at the H—— Hotel.

I had never visited Nellie's home before, but saw as we drove through its wide streets that it was a pleasant village, embosomed in a wooded valley, down which flowed a bright tributary of the Susquehannah.

The landlord welcomed me as a very God-send, and when after an hour or two's sleep, a stroll about the village and a splendid dinner, I asked him up to brew a pitcher of cold punch, and assist in demolishing the same, he instantly became my sworn friend. One thing only troubled him, my somewhat outre costume and unshaven phiz.

"From furrin parts, sir, I reckon?" was his interrogatory, as he leisurly sipped his second tumbler, like a man who is perfectly willing to enter into a free and easy personal "confab," and prolong it, when once begun to an indefinite extent.

"Oh, no, I'm an American."

"Bin out of the kendtry, then, I reckon?"

"For a few years. Your punch is excellent, landlord."

"Pretty fair I may say. Better whisky than this ain't often found, now a days," [with a sigh over the degeneracy of modern times and modern liquor]

"Ah, landlord, H—— is a right pleasant little town, I should judge. Lived here long?"

"Ten years, come next November, sir. An' it is a right pretty leetle place, as you say. Notion uv settlin' here, eh?"

"Well I can't say. Good society here?"

"Fust rate society—fust rate; an' if your not married, there's lots of fine chances; an' 'sides, the girls allers run arter a moustached man like you; ha, ha, ha."

"The deuce they do. But—ah—landlord, who are these fine chances you speak of—have your glass filled; more ice?—Trot 'em out."

"Waal, thar's Dr. Judkins' two darters—great ketches, I tell ye—rich as a Jew, the old Doctor is; and thar's the Squire's niece, hansum as she can live; and the Windham girls—right well-behaved young wimmen, tho' nothing extra in the money line; and Joel Dodd's darter, an—an—"

"So that comprises the collection, does it?"

"Lord! no, sir; thar's lots more uv them, if you onct git acquainted around a little, you know. We're about to lose our belle, tho'. What a pitty you didn't come a month or two sooner."

"Lose the village belle, did you say? Who is she, pray?"

LANDLORD—[with a look of surprise at my ignorance]—"Nellie Foster to be sure! Lord! but she's a beauty."

MYSELF—[something in my throat choaking me sadly]—"Nellie Foster, eh! She is the belle. Who is she about to marry?"

"An old bachelor from New York, so I hear. Old Japhet, her father, got kinder involved up yer in this Jessup coal business, and they say—tho' I don't know nothin' 'bout it—that Nellie marries on his account entirely."

MYSELF—[capsizing the punch bowl]—"What! Where does she live? Show me the house"

LANELORD—[just managing to catch and save his punch bowl]—"Waal, I reckon they'll be just about startin' for evenin' meetin'—you kin see them there if yer want ter. [With a sudden burst] Say mister, excuse me, but aren't you Nellie's young man what run off so long ago to Californy, and died there? I heered suthin of the story. It kum near to killin' Nellie, it did. I hope teu gracious you're the feller. But—with a shake of the head—you're teu late; Nellie weared mournin' for you a whole year, and afterwards when it was said as how you wasn't dead at all, Lord! how she tuk on. Married an Ingin or Mexican, didn't you?"

MYSELF—[who had listened to this speech in open-mouthed astonishment, and suddenly come to my sences at its close]—"You scoundrel, where did you pick up such a pack of lies? Show me Nellie's home?"

LANDLORD—"No use, sir. Don't flare up so; I'm only tellin what was told me. They've gone to church by this time; and I'll show you the meetin' house, if you'll come—'taint five minute's walk."

A short, silent walk, and I found myself at the doors of a brilliantly lit edifice, into which the congregation was slowly gathering.

The church was nearly filled; but as with seaching eyes I scanned each face, in none did I find aught familiar. She was not there; and I had half a mind to fling out of the house again as abruptly as I had entered.

The organ opened in a sweet, plaintive prelude. I sat and listened dreamily as I did years ago in the little rustic church down on the Jersey coast, when she and I sat side by sido, and in the flush of our youthful love, I thought the whole world must be ever ringing with music sweet as that which charmed our young, passionate hearts.

But what thrill shoots through me? Sweeping up the aisle, Nellie, in all her bewildering beauty, passes before me.

I sank back into the darkest corner of the pew, while a cowardly faintness crept over me; and I looked with bitterness down upon my uncouth form. She will never love me again—she can not—no, never; one more look at that dear face and then I'll steal out and away—away—

I raised my head. Heaven! she looks toward me—our eyes meet, and a sudden pallor dims her cheek—I can scarce refrain from springing to her.

Furies! how the prosy parson spins out his long discourse, while I'm in torture.

At last—and give a sigh of relief The congregation rise—Nellie looks toward me again—a wistful, doubting glance. I push hastily out, and through the crowd make my way down the aisle to the half-darkened porch.

She comes; and her eyes are scanning the crowd for some one she does not see. An over-dressed elderly man presses to her side; is it fancy, or does she shrink from his proffered arm? Close to her other side I draw, and stooping low, whisper the old familliar words: "This arm, Nellie, next my heart."

God! what a shudder. She would have fallen had not my arm supported her. Then, with never a word, but only one long frightful look, she takes my arm, and with her little hand pressed tightly in mine we pass out from the church door.

THE question is often discussed whether the savages enjoy life. We suppose they do, as they always seem anxious to take it when they get a chance.

Death of William the Third.

The king was sinking fast. Albemarle had arrived at Kensington from the Hague, exhausted by rapid traveling. His master kindly bade him go to rest for some hours, and then summoned him to make his report. That report was in all respects satisfactory. The States General were in the best temper; the troops, the provisions, and the magazines, were in the best order. Everything was in readiness for an early campaign. William received the intelligence with the calmness of a man whose work was done. He was under no illusion as to his danger. "I am fast drawing," he said, "to my end." His end was worthy of his life. His intellect was not for a moment clouded. His fortitude was the more admirable because he was not willing to die. He had very lately said to one of those whom he most loved:

"You know that I never feared death; there have been times when I should have wished it; but, now that this great new prospect is opening before me, I do wish to stay here a little longer."

Yet no weakness, querulousness, disgraced the noble close of that noble career. To the physicians the king returned his thanks graciously and gently.

"I know that you have done all that skill and learning could do for me; but the case is beyond your art, and I submit."

From the words which escaped him he seemed to be frequently engaged in mental prayer. Burnet and Tenison remained many hours in the sick room. He professed to them his firm belief in the truth of the Christian religion, and received the sacrament from their hands with great seriousness. The ante-chambers were crowded all night with lords and privy concillors. He ordered several of them to be called in, and exerted himself to take leave of them with a few kind and cheerful words. Among the English who were admitted to his bedside were Devonshire and Ormond. But there were in the crowd those who felt as no Englishman could feel—friends of his youth who had been true to him, and to whom he had been true, through all the vicisitudes of fortune; who had served him with unalterable fidelity when his Secretaries of State, his Treasurer and his Admiralty had betrayed him; who had never, on any field of battle, or in any atmosphere tainted with any loath some and deadly disease, shrunk from placing their own lives in jeopardy to save his, and whose truth he had, at the cost of his own popularity, rewarded with his bounteous munificence. He strained his feeble voice to thank Auverquerque for the affectionate and loyal services of thirty years. To Albemarle he gave the keys of his closet and private drawers.

"You know," he said, "what to do with them." By this time he could scarcely respire. "Can this," he said to the physician, "last long?"

He was told that the end was approaching. He swallowed a cordial and asked for Bentick. These were his last articulate words. Bentick instantly came to his bedside, bent down, and placed his ear close to the king's mouth. The lips of the dying man moved, but nothing could be heard. The king took the hand of his earliest friend, and pressed it tenderly to his heart. In that moment, no doubt, all that had cast a slight passing cloud over their long and pure friendship was forgotten. It was now between seven and eight o'clock in the morning. He closed his eyes and gasped for breath. The bishop knelt down and read the commendatory prayer. When it ended William was no more.

When his remains were laid out, it was found that he wore next to his skin a small piece of black silk ribbon. The lords in waiting ordered it to be taken off. It contained a gold ring and a lock of the hair of Mary.—Macauley.

THE DRAFTED MEN.—Reports from all parts of the North agree in representing the drafted men as deserting by wholesale. In a camp of 1,200, near Harrisburg, Pa., all save 400 deserted, and out of the 8,000 drafted in Maryland not over 1,500 will be available. In Ohio not more than one in ten of the drafted men will now be found in the ranks.—This wholesale desertion shows that the unfairness and utter want of systen of the present draft have brought the whole matter into contempt. It will be the duty of Congress to attend to this subject immediately, and abandon it altogether, or provide a conscript system founded upon the models afforded by other nations. The present law is unnecessarily harsh, and should be amended in such manner, that men with large families need not be forced into the ranks, while young men with no one to depend upon them are permitted to stay at home. Conscription, at the very best, is a cruel business, and should not be resorted to unless with every precaution against needless suffering N. Y. World.

WHY do you read this line?

RAISING TURKEYS.—Why is it that three out of four farmers do not succeed in raising turkeys? With all other poultry they are successful, but turkeys are abandoned by most farmers as too uncertain and troublesome to bother with. Now this is all wrong, for once a person gets a knack of raising these fine fowl they can raise just as many as they please So far as I am concerned I generally raise more turkeys than I know what to do with, and have turkeys now left over from last year that will be eaten as we want them. Last Winter we fairly revelled in roast turkey—gave quite a number away—sold some, have some, besides the breeders, still left. My plan of raising is simple, and I will give it in as few words as possible:

First, I never allow a turkey to set until about the middle of May. They will commence to lay early in April, but I take their eggs away as fast as laid, and keep them till they lay their second batch which will be finished about the second or third week in May. I then give her some 18 or 20 of her eggs and let her set. About the middle of June she will be off. I then put her and her young on an old barn floor, or other dry out-house, and feed on curd and cracked corn. Curd is the best for a continual feed when the farmer has plenty, but cracked corn and loppered milk will answer about equally as well. After they have been in doors for two or three days or long enough to get fairly on their legs—for the turkey is the weakest of all foul when young—I let them out, provided the weather is fine and there is no dew on the grass.

The great reason why people cannot or do not raise turkeys is because they turn them out as soon as hatched, and about the first wetting they get they keel over and die. To succeed in raising turkeys you must keep them dry until at least ten weeks old, when they will stand as much water as any foul—geese and ducks excepted. They must be driven in every night, and on all occasions when a storm is threatening. The reader will at once perceive there is care in all this, but when Thanksgiving and Chrismas come—to say nothing of all the Sunday roasts during the Winter, our care is lost in enjoyment, and we come to the conclusion that turkeys are worth raising.—Dollar Newspaper.

A FUNNY STORY.—Many years ago, in England, when travelers were wont to journey on horseback, and sleep two in a bed at taverns the following droll incident occurred at Chester:

Two young bloods stopped at the Red Fox tavern, and while going up to bed late at night (it being hot weather) they discovered the door of one of the bed rooms open. It so happened that a Scotchman and Irishman were both asleep in the bed; and the Irishman had "kicked the kivver off" and one of his legs lay naked and nearly out of bed.

"I'll have some sport now," said one of the bloods to his mate, "if you'll hold the candle a minute."

The candle was held while the young chap went in, and, taking up one of the Irishmau's spurs (travelers on horseback wore spurs in those days) buckled it on the heel of Paddy's naked foot. He then gave Paddy's leg a pinch and hid himself behind the door. Paddy—though not awakened—drew his leg suddenly back, and in this way sadly damaged the Scotchman's naked leg with the spur.

"The de'el d—n you," exclaimed Donuld, rubbing his leg, "au' ef ye dinna gang oot o' bed and cut yer toe nails, I'll soon be gettin' up and throw yer oot the window, yer loot!"

The Irishman still slept soundly, and soon put his leg back in its old position, when the young joker who had put on the spur stole up to the bed and pinched his leg the second time. In went the leg again, the spur striking the Scotchman s leg, who now got in a terrible passion, and began to pummel Paddy, exclaiming, as usual:

"Get oot o' bed an' cut yer toe nails, ye loot! do you fash a Christian mon to stand such rough diggin'?"

This waked up the Irishman, who at that moment bringing the spur to bear on his own other leg, vaulted out of bed. Having procured a light, he looked down at the spur with the greatest astonishment.

"By my sowl," said he, "what a stupid fool is the hostler of this inn; sure an' he tuk off me boots whin I wint to bed, and has left on one ov my spurs! Strange it is I didn't notice it."

This explanation being satisfactory to Donald, harmony was restored, while the author of the mischief sneaked out of the room to his own nest.

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1863.

On Monday next the chosen servants of the people will assemble at the Capital to organize for the duties of the session. We think it hardly likely that this Legislature will leave the capital for the Winter, as did the last; in fact it might with credit to itself, and profit to the people, omit many of the follies of their predecessors. To the expectants of place, such as Sergeant-at-Arms, Clerks, Doorkeepers, Pages, &c., these periodical meetings of our State Legislature are looked forward to with marked interest; but the people have at length become to regard it as a bore—a penance inflicted upon them, justly and legally, but one from which it seems no corresponding benefit ever flows; but we may console ourselves now with the thought, that it will be two years before another Legislature meets.

One important duty devolving upon the Legislature, is the election of a U. S. Senator, and until that important event of the session is over, doubtless but little legislation will be accomplished; for until that question is got rid of, all else will be made, to some degree, subservient to it.

We do not know why this should be a long session, though no doubt it will be. It is hardly worth while for the people to demand a short session, for the demand has been made upon every session of the Legislature for the past ten years, and each—with one or two exceptions—has been a little longer than its immediate predecessor. All we have to do, or can do, is to watch; scrutinize well the words and acts of the members and parties, and feel down deep into our pockets for the money to reimburse them for election expences, and gas blown off in debate.

California Red Wine.—D. Schindler presented us last week with a sample of California Wine, manufactured by him at Cacheville; and we pronounce it to be the best California Wine we have ever tasted in the State. Mr. Schindler has already shipped some from here to Sacramento and San Francisco. We understand there is quite a number of parties on Cache creek who has been making large quantities.

Indigent Sick.—The Board of Supervisors have advertised in another column that sealed proposals will be received up to the first Monday of February next, for the care and medical attendance of the Indigent Sick of Yolo county; said care and attention to be rendered at the county seat.

County Warrants.—In another column C. W. Reed, County Treasurer, has advertised the amount of Warrants outstanding, which will be paid on presentation. The interest on all warrants advertised, will stop from drawing interest from date.

Empire Minstrels.—On Wednesday evening last the Empire Minstrels gave one of their performances to a fashionable and large audience On account of their success, they will perform again this evening (Saturday), at the Union Hotel.

New Store.—Case & Goodhue will open, on Wednesday next, an assortment of well selected goods of every description, in the brick building next to the Union Hotel. See advertisement in another column.

Fine Carriage and Horses for Sale.—Messrs. Case & Goodhue advertises to sell, for cash, two fine horses with harness complete, and a family Carriage. See advertisement.

County Court.—On Monday next, Judge L. R. Hopkins will hold the regular term of the County Court, at Woodland.

Blooded Stock.—I. S. Jamison advertises to sell cheap, Burkshire, Essex, and Suffolk stock. See advertisement.

Peter Taylor, otherwise Peter Davis, who killed Ferdinand Hall recently near Nicolaus, the particulars of which we have heretofore published, avows that he acted in self-defense in taking that man's life. He says he was engaged in giving medicine to Hall, when the patient, being somewhat delirious, seized him by the throat and choaked him. Being pressed against the siding of the building, near a shelf, he reached for a hatchet thereon, and struck Hall on the head, killing him instantly.—Appeal.

Thursday last was the day on which the President's Emancipation Proclamation was to take effect. What the ultimate result of this proclamation is going to be, it is difficult now to foresee. The friends of the Administration claim that it is a necessary measure to a speedy overthrow of the rebellion, and hence is within the scope of the powers to be exercised by the Executive. But it is also pretty generally conceeded, that the Proclamation will be fruitless of any practical results, only so far as the country is subdued by the Federal armies, and thereby caused to submit to Federal authority. Then in what way the emancipation scheme is to assist in quelling the rebellion, we cannot see, when it is conceeded that our armies must first triumph before the slaves can be made free—the end for which we are fighting must first be attained, before we can employ the means which are to secure that result. If the extermination of the institution of slavery was the object of the war, and the overthrow of the rebellion the incident, then, indeed, there would seem perfect harmony in the plan; for just so far as our armies conquer, so far will the slaves be emancipated, and no farther. We may drive the rebels out of Tennessee and free her slaves; but to conquer Mississippi we may have to yield Tennessee back to the rebels again, and so on through every slave State, and yet the rebellion may not be crushed. That this proclamation may be productive of serious results in some portions of the South, can hardly be questioned; and that the innocent and helpless are to be the victims when the crisis comes, none can donbt, and woe to those upon whose garments their blood is found.

Occidental Hotel.—The Bulletin of the 26th in giving a full description of the Occidental Hotel at the Bay city, says that the reading room in that edifice is 33 by 64 feet in dimensions, with a lofty cealing 21 feet high, supported in part by a pair of Corintian columns, decorated in a superb and elegant manner, and comfortably furnished with tables, chairs and writing desks. At the end of the room will be a large and costly cabinet, designed more especially for the reception of all the mineral products of California, Nevada, and the Northern Pacific slope. The cabinet alone will cost $3,000, and an agent is now engaged in procuring and forwarding mineral specimens, etc, to fill it. In this room there will also be a branch telegraph office, thereby giving facilities to the patrons of the house to have instantaneous communication to whatever portion of this State the wires may extend; Nevada Territory, Oregon, and the Western and Eastern States.

Doing Away with Exensive Land Owners.—J. J. Owen, editor of the San Jose Mercury, and Assemblyman elect, is bound to maintain his reputation as a "funny" man. In the Mercury he publishes a bill entitled: "An Act to enable the citizens of the State to reclaim possession of the soil, and thereby promote the independence and welfare of society." This bill provides that "after the 4th day of July, 1863, no person shall be capable of acquiring in this State, by inheritance, purchase, gift, or otherwise, more real estate or land than is hereinafter provided." The bill then provides that, "in all cities, towns or villages, containing more than 10,000 inhabitants," "the limits of such acquisition shall be 100 feet square; in cities, towns or villages of less than 10,000 inhabits," "of lands under cultivatiod and occupation as farms, the limits shall be 150 acres, with 50 acres of untenanted woodland." The bill further provides: "Any surplus of land over the limits herein respectively defined, which may hereafter be acquired by purchase, gift, inheritance or otherwise, shall escheat to the State."—Santa Cruz Sentinel.

Paper from Sorghum.—In addition to procuring our sweets from this plant, we are in a fair way to derive another benefit of very large value from it, in material for paper. It is well known that the bagasse bleaches out white, and by experimenting with it it proves to afford a good substitute for or substance to mix with rags in the manufacture of paper. A paper mill on the Fox river is already using considerable quantities of it in the manufacture of wrapping paper, and are putting in the necessary machinery for preparing it for printing paper. When completed it will use from two to three tons of it per day. They have every confidence in the success of the enterprise. Prairie Farmer.

Disposition of Paroled U. S. Marines.—The company of U. S. Marines which arrived on the steamer Constitution went into barracks at Mare Island on Saturday afternoon. The authorities at Washington are being communicated with to-day upon the subject of their parole, and until definite instructions are received from headquarters the marines will remain under the care of their commanding officer, Maj. Garland. It is probable that the Marines will remain inactive until they are regularly exchanged.—Bulletin.

Not every man who dives into the sea of matrimony brings up a pearl.

BY OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.

The following dispatches are from the Sacramento Union of Dec. 31st:

Philadelphia, Dec. 30.—The Washington Star has the following regarding the last rebel raid:

At eight o'cock, Saturday evening, a rebel force of cavalry, with a battery, suddenly appeared in front of Dumfries. They attacked our troops, who had three killed, but the rebels were driven off.—Information to this effect having reached headquarters, troops were put in motion to cut off the enemy's retreat, if possible. After being worsted at Dumfries, the rebels pushed directly for Occaquon, where they had a slight engagement with the Federals stationed there, to the number of 1,500. Our forces maintained their ground. The rebels next proceeded up Bull run, crossing at Wolf Run, and thence to Bayard's Station and Annandale, where they encamped for the night. At daybreak, on Sunday, they were again in the saddle. In the meantime our troops at Fairfax Court House did their best to head them off in that direction, but being infantry, they were unable to do so. The rebels were last seen in the vicinity of Lewinsburg, where their number was estimated at 1,000, with four pieces of artillery, with which they escaped in the direction of Leesburg. The only plunder they got for their trouble, was 15 empty wagons.

The Press has news from Fort Monroe that Gen. Naglee received information from contrabands, which was considered reliable, that a body of 7,000 men, under Gen. Trimble, had been detached from the army at Fredericksburg, and was approaching Gloucester Court House, with a view, as supposed, of attacking the batteries at Gloucester Point. Our troops were under arms, and Naglee had prepared for an attack of the enemy in force yesterday. We had two gunboats in the river to assist.

New York, Dec. 30.—A Washington letter says rumors of foreign intervention are quite common again. But they cannot be traced to an authentic source. It is, however, claimed by many intelligent persons that Seward confidently expects the intervention of the French Government in our affairs, and has shaped his diplomacy with that Government wholly with reference to such danger.

A Norfolk letter contains the following: A British subject from Charleston brings intelligence that 19 negroes were hung in the street just before his departure, in consequence of the discovery that they were collecting and secreting arms. The whites there for some time past had been closely watching the negroes. They discovered an unusual number of funerals among them A white man, disguised, followed one of the processions, and on arriving at the burying ground discovered that the coffin contained arms, which were taken and buried, in a vault in which a number were already deposited. The consequence of this discovery was the hanging of 19 of the most intelligent conspirators.

Cairo, Dec. 30.—Jeff. Davis and Gen. Johnson were at Jackson, Miss., Dec. 18

There are now no rebels troops in Arkansas within 100 miles of Memphis.

Gen. Holmes had moved his forces to Little Rock, his ultimate destination being Vicksburg.

Affairs at Columbus, Kentucky, are unchanged.

New Madrid, Mo., is to be reoccupied by troops sent down for that purpose today.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Later information from Holly Springs, Miss, fully confirms the first report of the destruction of a very large amount of property at that place by the rebels. Depots, machine shops, all the buildings containing Commissary stores, 2 locomotives and 40 cars, $100,000 worth of cotton and 10,000 army blakets were destroyed, and ordinance stores blown up. They paroled 800 prisoners, and left during the afternoon. In the evening of the same day a detachment of rebels attacked Cold Water but were repulsed with considerable loss.

On Christmas the rebels took Ripley, Miss. That being on the line of retreat, it was expected that McArthur's division would intercept them between Ripley and Salem.

Yesterday's Louisville Journal says that the trestle work of the Nashville road near Muldrough's Hill was destroyed the day before by Morgan. Six hundred Federals opposed him, but after a short fight surrendered. If this is true it will take 30 days to restore railroad communication. Passengers on the train from Louisville to Shepardstown yesterday, report hearing heavy firing during the afternoon in the direction of Lebanon Junction. It was rumored that a portion of Morgan's forces were at Bardstown, and that they had destroyed a portion of the track near Elizabethtown.

The rebels have been repulsed three times from Mumfordsville, and everything there is safe.

The Postmaster at Richmond, Ky., sends a report that Col. Carter, commanding a brigade, has captured Knoxville, East Tennessee, and destroyed 4 bridges and a large portion of the railroad between Knoxville and Danbridge.

Gen Rosecrans' forces have driven the rebels into Murfreesboro

Louisville, Dec. 30—Col. Harlan attacked Morgan at Rolling Fork yesterday morning. The engagement lasted an hour and a half The Federal loss was 2 killed and 3 wounded. The rebels retreated towards Bardstown, having lost several killed and wounded, and 1 Captain and 6 privates captured. Morgan spent last night at Bardstown, and moved eastward on the Springfield turnpike this morning

It is reported that our forces had engagement at New Hanover this morning and repulsed the enemy. Shepardsville and Rolling Fork bridges are safe. The trestle work at Muldrough's Hill is seriously damaged, and it will require a month to repair it. Two small bridges, easily restored, were burned by the rebels near Lebanon Junction. The above comprises all the damage done by the rebels to the bridges on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and connections.

Rosecrans captured several cannon on his approach to Murfreesboro. Reports from that vicinity indicate that an engagement is progressing there. We have been for the last six days without any direct communication, and are therefore unable to give any particulars of his operations during that time.

Fayetteville, Ark, Dec. 31.—Additional particulars of the Federal advance to Van Buren have been received. Our army was 10 miles this side of Van Buren yesterday morning on its return, and would bivouac on the mountain top last night. It is expected to reach Prairie Grove to day. Gen Schofield joined them a few miles beyond the foot of the mountains. The steamers burned by our forces had full cargoes of grain and provisions for the rebel army. A large am't of army stores were also burned The rebels burned their arsenals and the ferryboat Fort Smith to prevent their falling into Federal hands. They also destroyed a large quantity of forage and provisions on the opposite bank of the river. A general conflagration was in progress when our forces left. Many deserters come into our lines, who report that two regiments of Missourians stacked arms a few days since, crossed the river and went home. Another regiment left a short time after, taking their arms with them. Two regiments of Texans are also said to have stacked arms and started home. A regiment of cavalry was sent in pursuit, but instead of arresting the runaways, joined them. Everything goes to show that the rebel army of the Trans-Mississippi Department is utterly demoralized. Our troops are in splendid spirits, having accomplished a most daring and successful raid without losing a man.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Intelligence from Alexandria represents that Stewart's cavalry, with artillery, were, on Monday, encamped 12 miles from that city, not far from Burkett's station, on the line of Orange and Alexandria road.

A telegram from the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, says all quiet on the Rappahannock.

New York, Dec. 31—The report that rebel cavalry have crossed into Maryland near Edward's Ferry, is confirmed They were followed to Vienna by a force of mounted men, under Capt. Mix, and yesterday a reconnoissance was pushed as far as Frying Pan, near Chantilly. The pursuit will be continued to day by Colonel Percy. Windham, a prisoner taken yesterday, says Lee, Stuart and Hampton left Gainness Station on the 24th, with 7,000 cavalry and six pieces of artilley. This force was afterward divided, Stuart going to Dumfries, with 1,000 men and two pieces of artillery. The whereabouts of the others are not known.

Exchange, 46½; gold, 33½; stocks, steady.

Tobacco in Illinois.—I am surprised at the large breadth of tobacco planted. There cannot be less than 15,000 acres in addition to the usual crop, which is as much more, for some counties on the Ohio river have raised it many years. It will average a full crop—perhaps more. On good ground and with careful culture, there will often be 2,000 pounds cured tobacco to the acre. So I am told. There is a good deal of money in this. I will relate an anecdote: A friend of mine has owed $400 several years He has had a greater sum owing to him. He could neither collect nor pay. For four years he has tried to get the money by raising wheat. The seasons were poor. Last year he was determined to succeed. He put in forty acres on his home farm. The land was prime, and I never saw ground in better order. On a rented farm he had eighteen acres more. The Hessian fly came. From the forty acres he brought to the barn one wagon load in the straw; from the eighteen acres, his shares, in two common sacks. Last Spring I induced him to raise cotton and tobacco. He has an acre of cotton which is fine, and two acres of tobacco. He will pay off the long standing debt and have money to spare. This is in the latitude of 37° 30'.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

Federal Revenue.—The Bee says that the United States Assessor, Mr. Every, reports that he has assessed the following counties for the month of November:

Sacramento $6,620 80, Amador $542 25, Eldorado $3,236 81, Placer $5,971 57, Nevada $2,360 47, Sierra $4,084 70, Yuba $6,509 42, Sutter $534 69, Butte $2,891 24, Plumas $1,507 60, Colusa $617 90, Tahama $338 25, Shasta $3,768 61, Siskiyou $1,045 58. Total $45,080 89. The Third District, embracing 11 counties, was assessed thus, as per report of Assessor Swim: 5th and 6th townships, Calaveras county, $3,193 76, San Joaquin $2,646 66, Tuolumne $6,986 30, Mono $55 20, Fresno, Tulare and Buena Vista $701 95, Mariposa $938 60, Stanislaus and Merced $1,228 80. 4th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th townships, Calaveras county $1,134 87, Contra Costa $1,622 91. Total, $18,515 06.

NOTABLE ARRIVAL.—We yesterday alluded to the arrival of the ship Scotland, from China. We again refer to the event as the pioneer in a series of enterprises which are destined soon to make San Fracisco the great store house—the en treport and depot—of commerce between America and Europe and the East Indies. The Scotland is the first adventurer in the line of steamers which is to make regular trips between this city and Chinese ports, and which is eventually, in connection with the Pacific Railroad, to make this the great highway of Eastern commerce—the port through which the wealth of the world will pour, and to which the eyes of nations will be turned. Nor is the realization of the last event far in the future. Ere four more years have rolled around, California energy and enterprise will have demonstrated the practicablity of steam communication across this continent. Already, able and energetic men have taken hold of the work, and such men, too, as know no such word as "fail." Before another summer has passed, cars will be gliding out of this city over fifty miles of the Pacific and Atlantic Railroad, and the click of the pick and spade of the laborer will be heard resounding in the midst of the Sierras, hewing out a path for the iron horse. From San Francisco to the plains of Utah, and across the west partion of the work in less than four years California enterprise will make a road over which the commerce of India can be propelled with cars; and ere that time the energy of the East will be stretched forth to meet us. Thus the prospects are more than fair that before the decade of 1870 rolls around, the silks and teas of China, with the spices of India, will be transported by steam through San Francisco to New York, and thence to London and Paris. And when that time arrives, what may we not expect of this city? Immigration fails to depict its wealth, its grandeur, its magnificence. Where now the Heights of Bernai repose in solemn stillness, there will resound the busy hum of trade, and the at present quiet Point of Rincon will be alive with the votaries of Commerce. Our suburbs will be at San Meteo, and the heart of the city will palpitate above where now glipe the cold waters of Mission creek.

These are not visionary words of an idle prophet or sanguinary dreamer; men who are to day advanced in years, will live to see them verified and then not be too old to enjoy the good things of this life.—S. F. One O' Clock News, 23d.

HAPPY SURPRISE.—The Grass Valley National records the following incident:

A brother and sister—the former a rover for a period of about 40 years, the latter a resident of Grass Valley for many years—met in this place on Christmas day, not having seen each other before that occasion for at least 38 years. The story of the brother's adventures is a long and an interesting one, as full of romance as the incidents woven into the startling romances of which Kit Carson is a hero; but we have not time this morning to even epitomize it, and can therefore give the reader but a mere glance at the story. Samuel Parkman, brother to Mrs. Delano of this place, left his home in the East in 1825, crossing the plains, and for years leading the wild life of a hunter in a region then almost unknown to white men. Mr. Parkman, by the way, a near relative of Prof. Parkman of Boston, whose tragic death at the hands of Dr. John W. Webster, a few years ago, is a familiar subject to a majority of newspaper readers, is the gentleman who named a prominent point known to all Californians who have crossed the plains, "Independence Rock." Mr. P. and a small party reached this famous rock on the 4th of July, 1830, and in honor of the great occasion named the rock as above. In 1831 Mr. P. went to Mexico, where he toook up his residence, becoming engaged in the lucrative business of silver mining. His home is now at Guanaxuato, Mexico, about 280 miles from the City of Mexico, where he is interested in a rich silver mine. The place he represents rich in everything but American enterprise. He has recently been an a visit to Washoe; but hearing that his sister was residing in Grass Valley, he came here on Thursday last, renewing old ties of family affection that 38 years of absence had not effaced or even lessened.

ROUTE OF THE PACIFIC RAILWAY.—The Route of the Pacific Railroad from Sacramento to a point within two miles of the California Central Railroad was finally located by the Board of Managers a few days ago. The line crosses the American river a short distance below Norris' ferry, and after reaching the north bank of the river runs in a direct line to Girder's ranch. The distance to this point from Sacramento is 18 miles; from Lincoln, 10 miles; and from Folsom, 8 miles. By a variation of the line over the two miles not yet located, the distance to Lincoln may be reduced to about 26 miles and to Folsom to about 24 miles. We are assured that the work on the road will be commenced within a week from the present time. When fairly started along the line above named some 300 hands will be employed, inclusive of the work on the bridge.—Union.

[Communicated.]

On the Death of Minnie Caldwell, who Died Dec. 14, 1862.

Uncomplaining little Minnie,
Kind and gentle, meek and mild;
May thy tender, loving parents
To God's will be reconciled.

Thou has't suffered, little Minnie,
More than we can realize;
Now thou'rt free from pain and sorrow—
Gone to dwell above the skies.

Not long since, dear little Minnie—
Just before Thanksgiving day—
You and I were out at recess,
And together we did play.

Little did we think, dear Minnie,
That you now would be with God,
And your body, cold as marble,
Would be laid beneath the sod.

Now thou art an Angel, Minnie,
Clothed in robes of spotless white;
Singing round the throne in Heaven,
Hand in hand with spirits bright.

BELLE L.....

Sacramento City.

AN anecdote of Louis Napoleon is thus told by the Paris correspondent of the London Times:

Walking the other day on the beach at Blarritz, his Majesty happened to meet an intelligent looking boy, about eight or nine years old, who took off his hat as he pas ed. The Emperor courteously returned the salute and said:

"Are you English?"

"No," replied the boy very quickly, and drawing himself up, "I'm an American."

"Oh! American, are you? Well, now tell me, which are you for, North or South?"

"Well, father's for the North, I believe, but I am certainly for the South. For which of them are you, sir?"

The Emperor stroked his moustache, smiled, hesitated a little, and said:

"I am for both."

"For both are you? Well, that's not so easy, and it will please nobody."

His Majesty let the conversation drop and walked on.

MANY men fail in life because when young they frame a false judgment touching their mental capacities and inclinations, and are ever after engaged in the task of proving to themselves and others that their verdict is a just one.

"IS THE smoke of my cigarette unpleasant to you, sir?"

"Oh, no, madam; I would rather inhale smoke from your beautiful lips, than kisses from any others."

A PENNY paper in New York says that a strong fisted servant girl in that city was recently assaulted by a couple of scoundrels named John and Elam Mile, and that she flogged them both. We have heard that a miss was as good as a mile, but here was a case in which a miss was as good as two Miles, and a little better.

WHEN we find ourselves more inclined to persecute than persuade, we may be certain that our zeal has more of pride in it than charity.

IT is little troubles that wear the heart out. It is easier to throw a bombshell a mile than a feather—even with artillery.

PATENT COMBINED GANG PLOW, SEED SOWER AND HARROW.

We have purchased the right this great labor-saving implement for the State of California, and are having a number made in the Atlantic States for this market.

With this combined Machine one man, with six horses, can do the work of three twelve inch plows, besides sowing the grain, and harrowing it in as he proceeds, thus finishing his work in the best manner possible, without being obliged to travel over the plowed ground. This Machine was very thoroughly tested by the farmers of Santa Clara county, where some eighty are now in use; also, by the Messrs. Hensel & Kethley, of this county, and Messrs. Hoppin Brothers, near Cacheville, Yolo county. It is made very substantial; is not liable to get out of order, and being on large truck wheels, the Gang Plow, Seed Rower and Harrow, runs lighter than three plows would, cutting the same amount of land.

We are desirous of having these plows generally introduced throughout the State, and are therefore prepared to offer very favorable inducements to farmers and the trade. The following are some of the names of our customers who have used them for the past two seasons:

Sacramento county—Hensel & Kethley.
Yolo county.—Hoppin Brothers, L M Curtis, Caleb Davis, C Travers, A J Scroggins.
